Bio

Trashunda began her journey as a welding student at Wallace Community College in Dothan, AL. After completing the program, she relocated to Pascagoula, Mississippi, and was excited to receive a union referral from local 693 for an opportunity to test for a welder at Huntington Ingalls Shipyard. She was hired as a 2nd class welder helper but quickly advanced to a first-class journeyman welder with now many certifications in stainless, aluminum, and many more certifications.

Why Trashunda Was Nominated

Trashunda has grown so much in the last few years as a tradeswoman - she is a team player on the job, first to get set up on the job, and always willing to stay overtime to make sure the job is completed. She has been acknowledged by the company for her hard work by receiving several certificates and plaques for her job performance and great work ethic. She is also always willing to share her story with other women to inspire them to also become a tradeswoman.
